Profile

Kempten University of Applied Sciences is located in the southwest of Bavaria in the heart of the Allgäu region. It was founded as a state-owned university of applied sciences in 1978. Over 5,000 young women and men study here with a good view of the Alps. Varied degree courses are offered, covering Business & Tourism Management, Social & Health Sciences, Engineering Sciences and Computer Science & Multimedia.

Some 150 full-time professors, 250 associate professors from the industry and 200 scientific and non-academic staff manage the study programme and assist with student life.

A practical approach to teaching and learning, an international outlook as well as up-to-date building and technology standards ensure excellent study conditions and academic training on an excellent level. All buildings are situated on our city campus and the University's moderate size creates a very personal atmosphere. The University offers dual study courses in co-operation with the Bavarian Industry Association as part of the 'hochschule-dual'-scheme. These courses enable students to increase the practical part of their studies, or to combine academic studies with a vocational degree.

The extensive research projects of Kempten University are divided into five research focuses: Energy Systems and Energy Technology, Networked Mobility and Vehicle Technology, Production and Automation Technology, Healthcare Management, Innovative Teaching Methods.
